

FLORA FAUNA NEWS

www.zoopharmadynamics.com

Hunger Should Not Be A Problem in The United States

By Brian Kanke

Chairman of Zoo Pharma Dynamics

If you are fortunate enough to have a Happy Thanksgiving with more food than you could eat for weeks, please count your blessings and pray for those who aren't so fortunate. There are great organizations out there doing all they can to feed the hungry. I have spent some time with the great people of Hunters for the Hungry. These food banks take donations from hunters who have harvested wild game and wish to donate the meat. This is so important because they provide people with protein, healthy meat-based protein, which is essential for a healthy life. You just can't get what the body needs from a plant-based diet; it's a fact. The wild turkey is not a species that can be donated. The very first Thanksgiving had deer at the table provided by the Indians to the Pilgrims. Deer have been a staple at the table for over 300 years; it was a great healthy food source. Let's not forget that over the last 40 years, 26.9 billion pounds of venison have been consumed, and it was all healthy.

As we all know, politics can ruin great things. False information ruins many things. Why would you want to ruin a great thing through false information when you are hurting those who need it most? Why would you cause doubt that would lead someone to go hungry? To promote your propaganda because you don't care whom you hurt or hinder as long as your end goal is achieved. You have a vendetta being promoted and lobbied to you by big money, and you accept it because those with all the money tell you to do so. Those telling you to do so have never been hungry in their lives, for their plates run over. Big money supersedes scientific facts because the facts go against the propaganda. As I like to call it, it's subliminal messaging; it works, very sneaky, and leaves everyone more confused to further hamper the great thing. Let's put an end to it because people are dependent and deserve a healthy meal. I will never judge or question why someone needs a meal; I have never walked in their shoes; that's between them and God.

We need to take as many legally harvested deer as possible to the food banks so people can get the meals they need. You're not going to harvest a deer that will cause harm to someone who decides to eat it. Regardless of what you read, what you're told, or any messaging you received, there is no current disease that can be contracted from deer to humans from eating well-prepared cooked venison. I've hunted my whole life, and we always looked for the biggest, healthiest looking deer so we could get the most meat. All the hunters I know have the same mindset. Deer are like all other species, including humans; we all carry some form of something undesirable, but that doesn't mean we aren't healthy, and when it comes to deer, I fully believe 99.9% of them are very healthy to eat.

Whether or not you approve of hunting, it's a conservation effort, and it's helping to feed the hungry. No one should wish for anyone to go hungry based on the options available to them to get a healthy meal. Please support your food banks and Hunters for The Hungry. The good Lord has blessed us, and we need to pay it forward. Deer hunters provide over 40 million meals to those less fortunate. I sleep well every night from my support of this program. Let's not let anything stop it. ■

Did You Know?

- No One Ate Turkey At The First Thanksgiving
- The Creation Of TV Dinners Stem From A Thanksgiving Mishap
- Eating Turkeys Won't Make You Sleepy

CONTACT US

800 ISOM RD
 SUITE 106
 SAN ANTONIO, TX 78216
 210.634.0693
 media@zoopharmadynamics.